Milwaukee Aldermen do not rank as high as the Chicago variety. One of the Milwaukee guardians was offered a bribe of $300, while about the same time a Chicago ordinance builder got mad and howled because some one offered him only $2,000 for his vote.

The New York Sun is now devoting its talents to "beating Tammany" and insists that the way to do it is for the Democrats who don't like Tammany and the Republicans to pool their issues and pull together as they did last year.

Freeman Yandell, of Kentucky, has sued another Kentucky man for $25,000 damages for alienating his wife's affections. This is a new departure for Kentucky. Heretofore the custom has been in that State to collect damages of that kind with a shotgun.

J. B. Johnson, a convict in the Missouri penitentiary, would like to retrieve his fortune and his good name, and asks a pardon that he may go to Alaska, make his pile and live like a good citizen. Although in 1883 confinement chafed him so that he led a revolt of the prisoners, fired the penitentiary and did damage to the amount of $300,500, he has become somewhat reconciled to his narrow sphere of action, and the only reason why he urges pardon now is because he is afraid the grabbers will have Alaska cleaned up by the time his term expires in 1912.

It is said that that petroleum lake in Alaska is inexhaustible as it is fed by springs.

104TH ANNIVERSARY

FAYETTEVILLE INDEPENDENT LIGHT INFANTRY

Celebrated on the Beach at Ocean View—Target Shooting—The Lumber Bridge Company Guests of the Light Infantry.

There is hardly an old citizen of Fayetteville whose name is not found on the muster roll of the Fayetteville Independent Light Infantry Company. Scarcely a father or mother of that good old town but have associations with the company of the dearest and holiest character, hence everything and everybody bespeaks the interest which every anniversary awakens. Every person in Fayetteville has the kindest, most liberal and friendly feeling towards this company, and the hearts of all the citizens are joined together as the heart of one man in testifying their respect for this ancient association. This association dates as far back as August 23, 1793, and is probably the oldest volunteer company in the United States. The company has had its days of trial, periods of gloom and despondency, as well as days of prosperity, and periods of bright and exalted anticipation.

The three first names to the articles of association are Robert Adams, John Winslow and Robert Cochran, who were elected commissioned officers, captain, lieutenant and ensign respectively. Captain Adams was a Scotchman by birth, one of the first and most successful merchants of Fayetteville, and died at Wrightsville Sound June 11, 1801. It is recorded that "on receiving intelligence of his death, the company assembled at the State House for the purpose of agreeing on the most eligible mode of going into mourning for the loss of their worthy captain, Robert Adams. It was agreed that they should meet at that place at 10 o'clock, the drum beating half an hour previously, six successive Sundays, with music playing, consisting of drum and flute; that they should wear the uniform, with bayonet, belt and crape on the left arm above the elbow; they were to march to the church, sit together as near as possible, and after hearing divine service march to the place where they met and be dismissed." Such was the respect shown to the first commander, who is said to have occupied an exalted place in the estimation and regard of the people of Fayetteville.

In 1807 and 1813 the company was not found wanting in cheerfulness, combined with celerity of movement, in responding to the call of their country, and this patriotism was maintained in 1861.

At the session of the Legislature of North Carolina in 1819, the following was passed:

Resolved, That the Governor be and he is hereby authorized and empowered to commission the officers of the Independent Company, of Fayetteville, with the following rank: The captain with the rank of major, and the lieutenants and ensign with the rank of captain; so long as the corps shall continue to hold itself armed and equipped agreeably to the rules and regulations.

From 1819 up to the present time the commander of the company has been distinguished by the title of Major, and the other commissioned officers, Captains.

In 1835, the company, under command of Major Strange, acted as the body guard of the great La Fayette who visited Fayetteville in that year.

From 1861 up to the present time the company has maintained its martial bearing, vigor and activity and soldier-like appearance, the respectability and character of the men affording the most gratifying evidence that the company has lost none of its ancient spirit.

NEGRO ARRESTED

For Disorderly Conduct on a Seacoast Train.

Walter Gregg, colored, will be arraigned before Justice Bunting this morning at 10 o'clock, charged with boarding a train after being forbidden to do so, carrying a concealed deadly weapon, and resisting an officer in the discharge of his duty.

The three charges mentioned are the outcome of a disgraceful scene which occurred Sunday afternoon on board the 6.10 o'clock Seacoast train en route for this city. When the train left Ocean View it had on board as a passenger a negro man named Walter Gregg; but Gregg, however, refused to pay his fare when requested to do so by Capt. E. L. Hinton, who was in charge of the train. The train was consequently brought to a stop and Gregg put off, but as the train started he got on board again, against the advice of Deputy Sheriff J. P. Flynn, who was a passenger on the train at the time. Capt. Hinton went to Gregg and informed him that he would again have to get off, which Gregg refused to do, and Deputy Flynn was called upon to arrest him. Gregg made an effort to draw a pistol, but Deputy Flynn was too quick for him, and with assistance managed to overpower Gregg, who made a desperate resistance, and locked him up in a box car attached to the train, until the city was reached, when he was carried to jail and locked up.

THE BLACKWELL MURDER.

A Negro Arrested at Rocky Mount for Complicity in the Crime.

Ed. Lomax, colored, was arrested by detectives yesterday at Rocky Mount, charged with being implicated in the murder of Mr. James Blackman, the railroad flagman who was shot on the 16th inst. Lomax states that he was on flagman Blackwell's train the night he (Blackman) was shot, in company with Ed. Purvis, the supposed murderer, who is now in Cumberland county jail awaiting a trial at the September term of Harnett county Superior Court. It will be remembered that Nero, the white tramp who is being held in custody as a witness against Purvis, stated that two negro men, one of them Purvis, got aboard flagman Blackwell's train at Kenly on the night of the murder. Lomax was taken to Fayetteville, his home, yesterday afternoon to be interviewed by Geo. M. Rose, Esq., attorney for the Atlantic Coast Line. Lomax, a number of years ago, was employed on the W., C. & A. Railroad at this point.

The body of Blackwell was to have been exhumed yesterday for examination as to the calibre of the bullet that caused death, etc.

The Indians led the Giants yesterday up to the sixth inning, when the rain began to fall and New York began to rise.

During the progress of one of the Brooklyn-Pittsburg games yesterday Umpire Hurst was knocked senseless by a foul tip from Donovan's bat. He, however, recovered in about fifteen minutes.

Naval Reserves' Excursion.

This is the day for the Naval Reserves' excursion. There will doubtless be a large crowd drawn by the many attractions offered. Aside from the attractions an inducement to a great many will be the fact that the excursion is given for the benefit of the cruise. It is hoped that on this account particularly there will be a good turn out.

The Wilmington Light Infantry team to contest in the target match at the beach is composed as follows: Willard, Forshee, Nash, Gillican, Gore, Cooper, Boatwright, Willson, Taylor (Walker), Windley, Taylor (G. H. Jr.) sub.

POLICE COMMISSION BUSY

Investigating Charges Against Members of the Force—Two Officers Engage in a Fistic Affair.

The Police Commissioners were busy yesterday.

Saturday police officer James McDonald, white, was suspended from the force, while a charge of abusing Clerk McLaughlin, of Front street market, was pending against him.

So early yesterday afternoon police officer Jas. W. Smith, who is on a furlough, and officer McDonald engaged in a fistic encounter, brought about by a a discussion of the charge pending against McDonald. The fight occurred on the corner of Front and Castle streets, and it is said that McDonald accused Smith of manufacturing evidence against him, which Smith positively denied. Thereupon McDonald called Smith a liar, and was promptly knocked down for his insulting remark. McDonald's right eye was considerably bruised and cut by the blow, and it is said that he accuses Smith of hitting him with a pair of metal-knucks, which Smith denies. McDonald was summoned to appear before the Police Committee—Mayor Wright and Aldermen Twining and Bessos—yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock, but failed to put in an appearance. A search revealed the fact that McDonald was intoxicated, and Police Sergeant Thomas Lossen, acting under orders, locked him up in the guard house, from whence he will be brought forth this morning to stand trial.

Police Officer, F. J. Toomer, colored, was before the Police Commission yesterday afternoon charged with lying to his superior officer, Chief Melton. The evidence was to the effect that Toomer had sworn out a warrant before G. W. Price, a colored justice of the peace, against a man for allowing his mule to run at large; that when Chief Melton asked him about such action, which is not in accordance with the duties of a policeman, that Toomer denied swearing out the warrant, which statement was proven to be false.

After hearing the evidence the commission retired, but finally decided to suspend Toomer from the force for thirty days.

LOCAL BASE BALL.

Coast Line Team Trying to Arrange a Series of Games with the Kinston Club.

Late last evening Manager Davis, of the Atlantic Coast Line base ball team, received a telegram from the manager of the Newton base ball team, stating that it would be impossible for that team to play the Coast Line boys on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week as expected.

The Coast Line boys having greatly strengthened their team preparatory to their game with the Newton team, and still being intent on calling themselves victors, immediately wired the manager of the Kinston team asking them to come and play on the same days this week as were scheduled with the Newton team.

It is to be hoped that the Kinston team will accept. The Kinston team to-day is probably the strongest in North Carolina, having recently played some of the crack teams of the State, with whom they came out winners.

The Coast Line team will line up with Gwaltney and Taylor, C. E., as their battery, than which no better can be found. They will be further strengthened by the addition of Belden, Johnson and Zellers, who recently played in the match games with the O. A. N. team against the Atlantic Coast Line team.

An additional feature of the game will be a purse to be offered by the Street Railway Company to the winner of two of the three games.

It is safe to say that the people of Wilmington will have an opportunity of seeing three games of ball superior to any which have been played hereabouts since the spirited contests of several years ago between the strong teams of Rocky Mount and Fayetteville, and as the management of the Atlantic Coast Line team have shown so much determination to bring about these games of ball, it is to be hoped that they will be liberally patronized.

To Leave Wilmington.

Mr. M. F. H. Gouverneur, the efficient general manager of the Wilmington Street Railway Company, leaves with his wife Saturday via the Atlantic Coast Line for Yonkers, N. Y., where he will accept a similar position with the Yonkers Railway Company. Mr. Gouverneur has been among us for number of years, and during his stay has made many friends on account of his many estimable qualities both as a gentleman and a business man. Hilton Park, under his direction, has always afforded attractions to visitors and home folks, and his management of the street railway has been a most able one. The STAR, however, is glad to learn that Mr. Gouverneur is to be succeeded by Mr. A. B. Sikelding, a gentleman who is well and favorably known in this city.

For Failure to Make Returns of Taxable Property—Capitol Keeper Burns Arrested—Fine Rains in Wake County—Treasurer Worth Sick.

[Special Star Correspondence.]

RALEIGH, N. C., Aug. 23.

Yesterday Rev. Burns, the keeper of the Capitol, drew a knife on Chas. Caldwell, colored, the janitor of the First Baptist church. Caldwell had started over one of the walks, which has been excavated for the brick pavement. Burns commanded him to halt, but Caldwell kept on and the Capitol keeper moved rapidly towards him with knife in hand. Caldwell says he will have the Rev. Burns indicted this evening for attempted assault. He has retained E. A. Johnson, the negro lawyer, to represent him.

Watermelons weighing as high as 68 pounds were sold on the local market last week. The crops were never so fine as this season. Good rains prevailed in Wake county Saturday night and Sunday. The drought was broken at a very opportune time. The farmers say the rains have been all they could desire during the Summer.

Rev. Leak has nearly completed his church. It will be one of the handsomest houses of worship occupied by a colored denomination anywhere. The pastor says the edifice will be occupied in November.

State Treasurer Worth is confined to his home by sickness.

Revenue Cutter Morrill in Port.

The United States revenue cutter Morrill arrived in port yesterday morning at half-past eight o'clock after having been absent in Southern waters since August 12. She received orders on that day to go to Fernandina to keep a lookout for filibustering vessels. She arrived there on the following Sunday, and after failing to detect any suspicious operations moved up to Brunswick. The tug Alexander Jones, in spite of the numerous reports tending to give her an unsavory reputation in the eyes of Government officials, was found peacefully towing a dredge boat up and down the waters around Brunswick, affording not the slightest ground for surpicion.

The Morrill has spent three days of her absence in port at Savannah and three at Charleston. She has found neither filibusters nor signs of filibusters. After coaling up yesterday, she left for Southport.

A Well Known Engineer Passes Away in Newbern.

Mr. Edward F. Lewis, clerk in the wholesale establishment of McNair & Pearsall, received a telegram Sunday bringing the sad intelligence of the death of his father, Capt. Edward Lewis, who passed away at his home in Newbern in Sunday.

Capt. Lewis was well known in Eastern North Carolina, having served for a long time as a locomotive engineer and also as engineer in the marine service. He was the first engineer on the Atlantic and North Carolina Railroad. Mr. J. T. Lewis, chief of police in Newbern, is a brother of the deceased. Mr. E. F. Lewis, of this city, is the only surviving child.

The funeral was conducted at 3.30 p. m. yesterday.

Cox, Miss Brown, Mr. and Mrs. McKay, Capt. Neill W. Ray and son, W. E. McLaughlin and wife, Miss Brady, Miss Alexander, A. H. Slocumb and wife, Mrs. Wm. Slocumb, Mrs. Jno. Broadfoot, Mrs. W. D. Fishing at the Rocks.

Capt. Bob Capps' sharpie Augusta returned to the city Sunday night from the Rocks with a party of well known anglers from Manchester, Va., on board. The party left the city on the 16th inst. and proceeded in the Rocks in the Augusta, where they remained until Sunday. Capt. Capps reports that the expedition, barring mosquitoes, was a decided success and a large catch of fish made every day. The four gentlemen comprising the fishing party left for home yesterday morning.

Bold Robbery.

Sunday afternoon the news depot of Mr. Jas. H. Cowan, on Princess street, between Front and Water, was entered and robbed. An entrance was effected by breaking a pane of glass out of a window which opens into an alley. The only article stolen was a box of 10 cents cigars, which was in a glass show case along with other tobacco goods. A desk in the store was also opened by means of a false key, but nothing was taken.

Funeral of the Late Miss Julia S. Harriss.

The funeral of the late Miss Julia S Harriss was conducted Sunday morning at 9.30 o'clock from the First Presbyterian church. There were present numbers of sympathizing friends and sorrowing relatives.

The pall-bearers, Messrs. S. W. Sanders, H. P. West, R. H. Northrop, A. J. Howell, Jr., E. K. Bryan and L. B. Sasser, together with a few others, went down to Wrightsville Sound on a special train leaving here at 8 o'clock. The train went on to Wrightsville beach, and returning brought several friends and connections of the family, among them Governor Russell.

The train arrived in the city in return about 9.30 o'clock, and the remains were taken direct to the church, where the solemn services immediately began, Rev. Dr. P. H. Hoge, the pastor, officiating. The hymns were rendered by a quartette, consisting of Messrs. C. H. Robinson, Jr., R. F. Fowler, H. K. Holden and J. D. Smith.

The interment was made in Oakdale. Many floral offerings, arranged in the most beautiful designs, were placed upon the newly-made mound.

Justice Bunting's Court.

Lucy Jane Coleman, colored, behaved quite naughty in Justice Bunting's temple of justice yesterday morning. The magistrate had just kindly finished placing the Coleman woman under a $50 bond for her appearance at the next term of the Criminal Court to stand trial for being a nuisance, and was about to make out the commitment which specified that the defendant was to board in a la parte style at Hotel King, when the Coleman woman took it into her head that the prosecuting witness, Julia Moore, also colored, was responsible for her downfall and proceeded to belabor the said prosecuting witness in a most unladylike manner, much to the annoyance of Justice Bunting, who was put to the painful necessity of having the two women separated by force. It is needless to state that the Coleman woman was locked up.

Out of Town Merchants.

The excursion brought a number of country merchants into the city yesterday in search of goods for the fall trade. Among them were A. M. Hall, Roseboro; A. E. Underwood, Huntley; E. C. Herring and William Sloan, Garland; J. H. Williamson, Cerro Gordo.

WILMINGTON, N. C.

TUESDAY MORNING, AUG. 24, 1897

RUNNING THE ROT RACKET.

We heard much talk during the Presidential campaign about 50-cent dollars, that being the value the gold organs put—for campaign purposes—upon the dollar, although they continued to take them in and pay them out as 100-cent dollars. Now they talk about the 40 cent dollar as they then did about the 50-cent dollar, although they take this 40 cent dollar and pay it out as a 100-cent dollar. There is quite a contrast between what they say and what they do and it either shows that they do not believe what they say, that they are lying, or that they are willingly letting themselves be imposed upon and cheated and that they are knowingly and wilfully imposing upon and cheating others.

It is no defence for them to say that they take these dollars for 100-cent dollars because they pass as such, and pay them for the same reason, for that would be just as good a defence for taking and paying out a clever counterfeit which was good enough in appearance to fool people and pass without detection. They ought to know, if they are honest in their assertion, that the dollar which passes with everybody from the Government down to the butcher and baker for a 100 cent dollar, which pays taxes, debts and buys 100-cents worth of anything we want, is worth 100 cents and not 50 or 40 cents. The talk about the intrinsic value of a coin is the sheerest rot. There is no more sense or pertinence in it than there would be in talking about the intrinsic value of a bank note. There is no intrinsic value in any of them. The only real value in any of them is the stamp that gives them credit, and that is not an intrinsic but an imparted value.

The Washington Post is a gold standard paper, but it is an honest and a sensible one, which has no tolerance for this 40-cent rot for which it thus taps some of the Gotham big dailies, which get their inspiration from Wall street:

"Those great metropolitan dailies, the Sun, Evening Post and World, of New York, differ in many respects—differ widely and radically—but they are three of a kind when it comes to lying about the silver dollar and its value. We may suspect the World of sheer ignorance when it says that 'a standard silver dollar is now worth almost exactly 40 cents.' The World is not remarkable for the extent or the accuracy of its information. The Sun and the Evening Post, however, are distinguished for intelligence—as distinguished for that as for the vicious and ignoble uses to which they sometimes put it. They are perfectly aware that, in saying 'the silver dollar is worth but 40 18 cents,' they are saying what is not true, and that deliberately. They know that the silver dollar, bearing the stamp of the United States, is worth exactly 100 cents and that it will be received at that value by the Government. It simply happens that in no matter relating to silver coinage are these Wall street organs willing to tell the truth.

"It is very unfortunate, though in view of the closing of the world's mints to the white metal it entirely logical and inevitable, that the bullion value of silver should decline so sharply. The uses of silver, save for money, are very limited. Like gold, silver has very little intrinsic value—that is to say, it is susceptible of conversion into very few agents of practical utility. A man cast away upon an uninhabited island and finding there a ton of virgin silver would cheerfully exchange the whole treasure for a frying pan, a jack-knife, or an iron spoon. The Klondike argonauts, should they suddenly be cut off forever from intercourse with civilization, would be glad to give all their gold for an ax apiece or the means of procuring simple food. The intrinsic value of these metals is very slight. They are of no use whatever to man in a state of nature, and to organized society, outside of coinage, they stand for little more than ornament and luxury. It follows, therefore, that in closing the mints to silver the world has divested silver of nine-tenths of its utility and value. The same result would follow a similar action with reference to gold. Neither metal would be in any serious demand or bring any considerable price if the nations should by common consent, destroy their money attribute.

"The fact about silver is that, so long as it remains excluded from the world's mints, its bullion value must depreciate, but it is not true—it is absurdly and impudently false—that the value of the stamped coin has declined, or that it can decline so long as the nation which has stamped it continues to be solvent. The silver dollar will buy just as much now as it did ten years ago. It will buy 100 cents worth. These New York newspapers, with the possible exception of the World, know that it will, and are striving only to confuse the public mind and to disseminate a lie."

It looks as if the deliberate purpose of these Wall street organs is to degrade not only silver bullion, in the depreciation of which they seem to take much delight, but also the coined dollars which form such a considerable part of our currency. If this country had no silver currency to maintain, had no silver mines to add to our wealth, and had to go upon the market and buy silver for coinage purposes as some other Governments have to do, we could understand this persistent abuse of and war upon silver, but when one-half of the world's stock of coin consists of silver, when one-half of our stock of coin consists of silver, and when our mines supply a very large percentage of the silver which the world needs for coin and for other purposes, this outcry against it, this persistent effort to degrade it and make it worthless, is to us so utterly stupid or grossly criminal as to be beyond our comprehension.

The New York World, one of the papers rebuked by the Post, seems to have had a lucid moment between its 40-cent rot deliverances in which it got off the following, which we may remark has more sound sense in it than anything that journal has uttered for some time on the sound money question:

"The London Times discusses the extraordinary fall in the price of silver, and finds it to be an argument against any attempt at international bimetallism. But is it not rather the strongest possible argument in favor of an attempt to preserve by international agreement all the vast wealth now represented by silver coinage and all the commerce that is dependent upon that coinage?

"Mexico, Brazil and all the South and Central American republics except one have silver as the basis of their monetary systems. So has India and so has China. France, Austria and other European countries hold in their banks no less than $1,500,000,000 of silver coin. If silver continues to decline in prices all this money must go into the limbo of nothingness.

"Who is to bear the loss? What is to become of the commerce of the silver countries—England's best customers—if their money is to be wiped out? Mexico has already put a stop to foreign trade for this cause. Must not all the other silver countries do the like if the decline continues?

"Is it not more imperatively necessary now than ever before for England and Germany to join with the United States in an earnest effort to find some way out of this cul de sac? Is not our appeal for an international agreement more pressing and more reasonable now than ever before?"

A streak of daylight with a dash of common sense got into the World office somehow, and the above extract was the result. The questions propounded are pertinent, not only asked of the London Times, which is echoed so much in New York, but pertinent also for the gold organs which echo it. What is to become of the the world's stock of silver coin, and what is to replace it when they have succeeded in degrading it still further and making it worthless? What is to become of the countries whose commerce in carried on with silver and have little gold? How long would it take to supply the world with a gold currency when after all the ages that have passed the world has but about $4,000,000,000 of coined gold now?

It is estimated that the recent decline in the price of silver will increase the annual interest on the debt of Mexico $2,000,000. How much will it increase the interest on our national debt? How much will it increase the interest on the $6,000,000,000 of American railroad and other securities held abroad? How much will it increase the interest on mortgages and other private indebtedness payable in gold? These are nuts for gold men to crack and after cracking them we would like to have them give a good, honest reason why they rejoice in the depreciation of silver.

MINOR MENTION.

Up to the time that the gold powers succeeded in demonetizing silver the ratio the world over between it and gold was from 15 to 16, and ever since then these ratios have been maintained in the coinage of silver irrespective of the production of either metal, or of the price of silver bullion. But notwithstanding the fact that silver dollars were as good for all practical purposes the world over as gold dollars, the gold men have so managed as to make these conditions pay them more silver to discharge debts due to them, and have insisted on the difference between the bullion value of silver and gold until they sometimes got double the amount of their original debt, and now get nearly two and a half times much. In view of these facts the following from an interview with the Director of the U. S. Mint is interesting:

"Thirty-nine and twenty-nine hundredths to one is the ratio of silver to gold, according to the close of yesterday's quotations. Silver never was so low before. It will not go up. It is my judgment that the price will fall to 40. In that event the ratio will be exactly 51.67 to 1."

"You still think that Mexico will go on a gold basis?"

"Certainly. At the present price of silver it is necessary for her to pay $9.86 for every dollar of foreign obligation she owes. If a Mexican owes a New York merchant $100, and has to pay him today, it is necessary for him to pay the New York merchant what is equal to $986 in Mexican money.

"From all present indications, it will be less than fifteen years before every country on the face of the earth adopts the gold standard. They will all be forced to go to it in self-defence. Even China to-day makes her foreign loans in gold, and within the empire itself all coins, both gold and silver, go by weight. Japan, I think, intends to sell her silver before very long. It looks to me as if her recent move was preparatory to calling in her full legal tenders. She has established a ratio at which she doubtless hopes to market her stock of silver, and as soon as that is done she will go squarely to the gold standard.

"The use of silver must be limited in future to subsidiary coinage, or, as France and the United States now use it, to money whose value is maintained by being kept on the gold basis, just as a volume of paper money might be thus maintained.

"One thing we should do at once, and that is to reorganize our system of subsidiary coinage, so as to put pretty nearly the metal value of silver into our coins. The temptation to counterfeiters is altogether too great when the disparity between the nominal and the commercial value of the coins is as large as at present.

"I cannot see what Governor Pingree was thinking about the other day in proposing laws to restrict or diminish the use of gold in the arts. Besides the impracticability of any such legislation, it is fair to say that not more than one-third of the current output of the gold mines finds its way into the arts. Gold is melted over and over again so many times that a small quantity goes a far ways. The figures have long shown that the world's annual output was increasing so fast that there is no difficulty whatever in maintaining the payments of the world upon the single gold standard as the money of ultimate redemption. But I suppose I ought not to be interviewed matters, since every time I say anything Senator Stewart and and his friends get after me and denounce me as an enemy of my country."

Director Preston is presumably familiar with the movements of the gold men, who are pursuing their plans to force the world to a gold basis. They have captured Japan, and now have their clutches on the throat of Mexico, and will soon have China in their grasp. How this thing works is shown by the statement of Mr. Preston that the Mexican merchant who wants to pay a $100 debt due to a New York merchant must pay $236 in Mexican money to do it. This is one of the results of the combination to force down the price of silver. They may succeed in putting the world on a gold basis in fifteen years, but it will be a bad day for the world when they do. There is not gold enough in the world to furnish an ample circulating medium and, with all due respect to Director Preston, there never will be.

* * *

When the Dingley tariff bill was under consideration and it was proposed to increase the rates of protection on iron and steel, the iron manufacturers of Birmingham, Ala., said they didn't want any protection; that they were amply able to take care of themselves and meet any competition that might be brought against them. But there were other iron and steel manufacturers in other States who said they needed more protection and they got it. Hon. Mark Hanna, who brought Mr. McKinley to the front and elected him President, is a large manufacturer of iron and steel. Other manufacturers of iron and steel in the North contributed liberally to the election fund which Mr. Hanna raised. They had to be recognized when the tariff bill was constructed, and the result was more protection for them. The fact that the Alabama iron men did not want protection and said very plainly that they could get along very well without it suggests the inquiry if the Alabama men had needed it and the iron and steel men on the other side of the line didn't want it, would the Alabama men have got it? Not much. The men who got up this tariff had their eyes upon Northern industries, and never for a moment permitted Southern industries to enter as a factor into their deliberations. To help Northern industries, and thus indirectly help to hold back Southern industries, is and has been one of the principal inspirations of all the Republican tariff bills that have ever been framed.

— Raleigh News and Observer: There is land in Anson county that rents for as much per year as it is valued at on the tax books. The average valuation of land in that county is less than $3 an acre; the State pays $2,300 rent for 1,100 acres used as a State farm. This land certainly ought to be rated at $20 an acre.

— Statesville Landmark: Last Spring Will Myers, of North Iredell, committed suicide by hanging himself. He had been married but a few months and it was in evidence that he and his wife lived pleasantly together. No reason, therefore, could be assigned for the act except despondency from drink. Within the last few days, however, Coroner Young has been reliably informed that Myers had previously married in Virginia a woman of some wealth; that after living with her for a time he secured what money he could get from her, took her mule and skipped. After coming home he married the woman with whom he was living at the time of his death. It is now thought, if this story be true, that Myers feared arrest for bigamy and that this was the cause of his hard drinking and subsequent suicide.

CURRENT COMMENT.

—— The treasury reports show during the fiscal year ending last June the imports of the sugar trust were one billion and ten million pounds in excess of those of the preceding year, and as this enormous amount of sugar came in under the low duties of the Wilson law the trust stands to make a profits of $16,000,000.—New Orleans States, Dem.

—— There is now talk of intervention in the Cuban difficulty. This looks, however, as if might posbe Hanna politics. The report is to the effect that our foreign representatives have been instructed to "feel" Europe on her position. ANIMALS SHAM DEATH.

Tale of a Clever Fox That Came to Life and Escaped.

Two cases are on record of foxes being discovered in henhouses. In each case the fox not only completely deceived the finder, but allowed himself to be dragged out by the brush and thrown down, in the one case in a field and in the other on a dunghill. In each instance the fox then jumped up and ran away. Another example is that of a fox which dangled across a man's shoulder as it allowed itself to be carried along a road for more than a mile. At last it bit the man and was promptly dropped. A cat was observed to carry a weasel home in its mouth, the weasel dangling helplessly. The door of the house was closed, and the cat, in conformity with its usual habit, mewed to gain admission. To mew, however, it had to set down the weasel, which jumped up and fastened on its nose.

The following instance was observed by the late Professor Romanes: A corncrake had been retrieved by a dog, and, having every appearance of being dead, was put in a man's pocket. Presently violent struggles were felt, and the man drew the bird out. To his astonishment, it again hung in his hand limp and apparently lifeless. It was then set upon the ground and watched from behind some cover. In a short time it raised its head, looked around and decamped at full speed. A singular fact that must not be overlooked in connection with this phenomenon is that some animals have been found to be actually dead which were at first thought to be shamming. Romanes, for instance, found this to be the case with a squirrel which he had caught in a cloth and with which he wanted to experiment with regard to the feigning of death.

Sir E. Tennent also relates in his book on the "Natural History of Ceylon" that the wild elephant sometimes dies when being taken from the corral by tame elephants. Further, he relates a case in which, being convinced that an elephant was dead, he had its lashings taken off, he and a friend leaning against it the while to rest. Hardly had they left it when it rose hurriedly, and, trumpeting vociferously, rushed off in the jungle. The fact, however, that a squirrel or an elephant when captured unhurt will die is sufficient to show that a most powerful nervous derangement of some sort is induced.

When the late Joseph Thomson lectured on his African experiences, he related how the first buffalo he shot tossed him, and how when he came to himself and tried to sit up he found his antagonist glaring at him a few yards away. He told how he recollected that a buffalo does not try to toss a creature which shows no signs of life, and how he let his head sink slowly back and lay shamming death.

Pheasants in flying across wide stretches of water have been noticed suddenly to fall. In this way they are apparently drowned. It is perhaps dangerous to assert positively that fear is here the active cause of death, yet we are apparently justified in believing that a paroxysm of fear can produce sudden death. The squirrel and the elephant may have died of fright; certainly death in man can be produced by sudden fear, and although man has a much more sensitive nervous mechanism the lower animals have an extremely instinct of fear.

Professor Lloyd Morgan mentions the case of a surface man working in the Severn tunnel who was nearly killed by a train. It is stated that "his attention was so riveted that he was unable to make, or rather he felt no desire to make, the appropriate movements;" that he could not help watching the train, but felt no terror. With the greatest difficulty he managed to shake himself free of his fascination. In describing his feelings when the danger was past he is reported to have said: "I came over all a cold sweat and felt as helpless as a baby. I was frightened enough then." This may perhaps be taken as a cataleptic condition without fear.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

LET ...S LAUGH LOOSE.

It Proved an Ice Crusher and Captured the Frosty Audience.

"There's nothing in the world more contagious than good, hearty laughter," declared the manager who had a rough and tumble time of it in his earlier days, but is now on the warm and sunny side of Easy street.

"One time down in southern Ohio I struck a town that was really virgin soil for the theatrical missionary. There wasn't a minute of daylight that our posters were not surrounded by a crowd with mouths and eyes wide open. When night came, the hall was jammed, but it couldn't have been a less responsive audience if the penalty for laughing had been solitary imprisonment for life. The show wasn't half bad, and yet we couldn't get a hand or even a smile.

"While the people on the stage were guying the crowd and talking about the comforts of the arctic climate, who should appear at the window of the box office but big Bill Meeker, that I used to know at home. He was a traveling man, and with him was Shorty Tompkins, just as big and just as jolly.

"'For heaven's sake, Bill,' I broke out, 'get right in there, you and your friend. Set that laugh of yours to going. Cut loose for all you're worth and see if you can't prove an ice crusher.' No sooner were they seated than Bill caught a joke, opened a mouth big enough to catch baseballs and let forth a roar that dropped icicles from the eave troughs. Shorty joined in, and the players couldn't escape the contagion. Pretty soon some of the old farmers broke into a cackle, and inside of three minutes it was simply pandemonium. People laughed till they were sick. Every act was encored. It was 1 o'clock before we could get the curtain down, and we had over 300 invitations to return."—Detroit Free Press.

Something to Depend On.

Mr. James Jones, of the drug firm of Jones & Son, Cowden, Ill., in speaking of Dr. King's New Discovery, says that last winter his wife was attacked with La Grippe, and her case grew so serious that physicians at Cowden and Pana could do nothing for her. It seemed to develop into Hasty Consumption. Having Dr. King's New Discovery in store, and selling lots of it, he took a bottle home, and to the surprise of all she began to get better from the first dose, and half dozen dollar bottles cured her sound and well. Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, is guaranteed to do this good work. Try it. Free trial bottles at R. R. BELLAMY'S Drug Store. †

COTTON MARKETS.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

NEW YORK, August 23.—It has been a long day since the Cotton Exchange developed the activity and excitement witnessed on 'Change at the opening of business this morning. It is safe to say that the most sanguine bull operators were not prepared for the advance that occurred on the first call, which commenced with August showing an advance of thirteen points, gained strength as it progressed and culminated with an advance of twenty-five to twenty-seven points. There had been a large accumulation of buying orders over night, and notwithstanding clearly selling pressure from Liverpool and New Orleans, the undertone of the market was unmistakably stronger. After a break of six to ten points which followed the first call, the market gradually righted itself and not only returned to the best prices but made a further decided gain at the best point of the day, showing an advance of 36@38 points. Signs of manipulation in August, also in September and October were detected. The general improvement was based on an advance of 4⅛ to 5⅛d. at Liverpool. Private cables state that the English cotton trade fear they have under-discounted claims of damage to cotton through recent excessive rains in the cotton belt. The leading activity centred in October and January, the former selling to 7 21, an advance of 36 points on Saturday's closing figures and the latter to 6.18, at an advance of 35 points. In the afternoon the market was alternately strong to easier, but always very active and excited, with the tone finally firm at a net advance of 33@35 points.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Evening.—Cotton quiet; middling 8c.

The Paper of the Oxford Bibles.

The paper making for Oxford Bibles is a specially important and interesting part of the work. At Wolvercote, a mile or two out of Oxford, the university has a large mill for the supply of its own requirements. A good deal of the paper they turn out here is made out of old ships' sails, the materials of which, after battling with storms in all quarters of the world, come here for the purpose of being made into paper, printed in almost every language under heaven and bound up into volumes to be again scattered far and wide into all the uttermost ends of the earth.

This Wolvercote paper mill has much to do with the great reputation that Oxford has acquired in the production of Bibles and other devotional books. Twenty years ago and more the management here bit on a valuable invention in paper making, and ever since their "India paper" has been the envy and the puzzle of manufacturers all over the kingdom. There are said to be only three persons living who know the secret of its make, and, though the process has never been legally protected and all the world is free to imitate the extremely thin, but thoroughly opaque and wonderfully strong and durable, paper of the best Oxford Bibles if they only knew how, all the world has hitherto quite failed to do so.

It is as thin as tissue, but perfectly opaque and so strong that a strip of it three inches wide has proved to be capable of sustaining a quarter of a hundredweight. Over 160 works and editions are now printed on this paper. This special advantage has very largely helped Oxford to retain the leading position which it originally gained by being nearly the first, if not quite the first, printer of books in the kingdom and by the prestige of its name.—Chambers' Journal.

Improbable.

"Birdie," said Mrs. McGinnis to her daughter, "what were you sitting up reading last night? Was it a novel? Tell your mother." "Yes, ma, it was a novel." "And who writ it?" "Dumas the older." "Now don't tell me that. Who ever heard of an elder writin a novel that you'd sit up half the night to read?"—Texas Sifter.

THE CELESTIAL SURGEON.

If I had faltered more or less
In my great task of happiness;
If I have moved among my race
And shown no glorious morning face;
If beams from happy human eyes
Have moved me not; if morning skies,
Books, and my food, and summer rain
Knocked on my sullen heart in vain—
Lord, thy most pointed pleasure take
And stab my spirit broad awake.
Or, Lord, if too obdurate I,
Choose thou, before that spirit die,
A piercing pain, a killing sin,
And to my dead heart run them in!
—Robert Louis Stevenson.

A SIGNALMAN'S STORY

No, sir, I'm proud an thankful to say that, although I've been a signalman now for close on a quarter of a century, I've never yet had an accident at my box. I've come very near it on several occasions, as you may guess, but, somehow, Providence has always seemed to step in just at the right moment an prevent it.

One case I especially remember.

I was on day turn that week, an as I walked down the line a bit afore 7 in the mornin, the sun shinin brightly an the birds titterin an hoppin about from bush to bush, I couldn't help thinkin how much nicer an pleasanter it was than bein on nights, wi' nothin but the screech of a locomotive every now an again, or maybe an occasional fog signal to keep you company through the long, dark hours.

"Mornin, Joe," says I, when I got to the box, to my mate who'd been on durin the night. "Nice day, ain't it?"

"Aye, very nice," says Joe.

"Anything special in the night?" says I.

"No, nothin much. Down Scotchman 15 minutes late, through a block on the line higher up, an two trucks o' cattle in the siddin for the pick up"—that's a goods train we callin every station if required, sir—"to take forward this mornin. That's about all, I think."

Well, Joe staid in the box talkin an gossipin to me in a friendly sort o' way for about half an hour, as we usually did, whichever of us happened to be just goin off duty, an then he slung his bag over his shoulder an went off home to get his breakfast an bit o' well-earned rest, leavin me alone for another day in charge o' the old cabin.

It was a pretty busy box, an there wasn't much time hangin on your hands, so to speak, but what bit there was I generally employed in polishin up the big levers o' steel an brass—it was always Joe's an my boast that you couldn't find so much as a speck o' dust on any of our handles—an thinkin o' the wife an child at home.

We'd been married about six years, had Jenny an me, an a happier couple I don't think you'd have found anywhere. She was always cheerful an smiling, an as good an careful a manager as you could set eyes on, an although my wages weren't very much to talk about at that time, she made them spin out an do things in a way that fairly astonished me. The house was always comfortable an nice, an as clean as continual dustin an scrubbin could make it.

Very proud was Jenny when I got put on at the junction. She said it showed they thought a good deal o' me, an, right enough, it was an important post for a young man, as I was then, who hadn't been signalman more than a matter o' some seven or eight years. We'd never had but the one child, little Nelly. She was just 5, an it would have done your heart good to see her. wi' her winsome ways an her prattlin baby talk.

As for Jenny an me, we just idolized her an nothin less. Nothin was too good for her, an when she was dressed up in her best little frock on a Sunday we were that proud of her we didn't think there was another girl like our Nelly in the whole wide world. Many a time have I gone wi'out tobacco for a week in order that she might have her new pair o' slippers or new pinafore a bit sooner.

We used to call her our little bit o' sunshine, an I'm sure a better name it would have been hard to find, for she seemed to light up the house, runnin in an out in her play, just like a gleam o' sun does. Every mornin when I went off down to the box after kissin them both she'd stand at the door, holdin on to her mother's gown wi' one little hand, wavin the other in the air an callin out after me, "Doodby, dada, dear," till I was out o' hearin, me turnin round every few yards an wavin my hand to her in return.

Well, on this particular mornin things went on much the same as usual, an I was kept pretty hard at it till about 12 o'clock pullin back the levers an enterin up in my book the times o' the trains as they passed.

After that time I had a bit o' slack till the 1 o'clock down express was signaled, an then Nelly would bring my dinner down an stay playin about in the box till I'd eaten it.

This was the one little bit o' the day that I always looked forward to wi' more interest than any other unless it were knockin off time, an whenever the weather was anything like fine I was sure not to be disappointed.

At first Jenny was nervous an didn't like the idea o' the child walkin down the line.

"Oh, Jim," she said, "is it safe for her to go? Think what we should do if anything happened to our little Nelly."

"Oh, never fear, lass; she'll be all right," I answered. "Won't you, Nelly?" catchin her up in my arms an kissin her.

"Yes, me all right," lisped Nelly in her pretty baby talk, noddin her little head wisely an makin us both laugh at her earnestness.

After that she came regularly, an I used to look out for her toddlin down the footpath at the side o' the line—I'd cautioned her never to go off it, an as she was a sharp little thing she soon understood why—wi' my dinner basket hung over her arm, as proud an pleased as possible to think that she was takin her dad his dinner.

Very proud was Jenny when I got put on at the junction. She said it showed they thought a good deal o' me, an, right enough, it was an important post for a young man, as I was then, who hadn't been signalman more than a matter o' some seven or eight years. Every mornin when I went off down to the box after kissin them both she'd stand at the door, holdin on to her mother's gown wi' one little hand, wavin the other in the air an callin out after me, "Doodby, dada, dear," till I was out o' hearin, me turnin round every few yards an wavin my hand to her in return.

Well, on this particular mornin things went on much the same as usual, an I was kept pretty hard at it till about 12 o'clock pullin back the levers an enterin up in my book the times o' the trains as they passed.

After that time I had a bit o' slack till the 1 o'clock down express was signaled, an then Nelly would bring my dinner down an stay playin about in the box till I'd eaten it.

This was the one little bit o' the day that I always looked forward to wi' more interest than any other unless it were knockin off time, an whenever the weather was anything like fine I was sure not to be disappointed.

At first Jenny was nervous an didn't like the idea o' the child walkin down the line.

"Oh, Jim," she said, "is it safe for her to go? Think what we should do if anything happened to our little Nelly."

"Oh, never fear, lass; she'll be all right," I answered. "Won't you, Nelly?" catchin her up in my arms an kissin her.

"Yes, me all right," lisped Nelly in her pretty baby talk, noddin her little head wisely an makin us both laugh at her earnestness.

After that she came regularly, an I used to look out for her toddlin down the footpath at the side o' the line—I'd cautioned her never to go off it, an as she was a sharp little thing she soon understood why—wi' my dinner basket hung over her arm, as proud an pleased as possible to think that she was takin her dad his dinner.

Then, when I'd taken it out o' the basket, wi' a kiss for porterage, she'd play round an look wi' big, wonderin eyes at the great brass handles an the telegraph needles till I'd finished, when she'd start back home wi' the empty basket—it wasn't more than a quarter o' a mile—an I'd watch her little figure growin smaller in the distance wi' feelin's just as proud as her own.

This had gone on for some time now, an Jenny had quite forgotten her fears.

The express was late that day, an I remember wonderin what could have delayed it, as it was usually signaled punctual to the minute. At last, however, I got the ring on the bell that told me it was approachin, an not long after I heard its rumblin some two or three miles away. After I'd pulled my levers over an set the signals off for it to run into the station I went to the side o' the cabin an looked out o' the window.

The first thing that caught my attention was a man, about 100 yards off, runnin wi' all his might toward me, wavin his hands an pointin in a very excited manner somewhere.

"What's up now?" thought I, but I couldn't make head or tail o' his gesticulatin, so I waited wi' some impatience for him to get nearer, an then I saw that it was one o' the plate layers belongin to the gang that was workin near by.

"Switch the express on to the loop, Jim, quick!" he gasped. "The bridge has fallen in!"

Before I go any further let me explain the position o' things a bit.

My box was a junction, as I've told you. To the south was the main line from London, which there split in two, one comin through the station here an the other missin it an goin round the "loop," as we call it. On the station line, about 300 yards past the junction, round a bit of a curve, was a large tressle bridge over the river. It was gettin considerably old, an they had been talkin about renewin it for some time past, but somehow the months had drifted by an no start had been made on the work yet.

Instantly I guessed what had happened. The rains durin the last week or two had been very heavy, an the river was in consequence flooded an runnin very strong, an the unusual weight an rush o' water had loosened the old an rotten supports o' the bridge, which never ought to have been allowed to get in such a condition, till it had suddenly come topplin over into the seethin an bollin flood below.

For a moment I was staggered by the suddenness o' the news, but then I braced myself together an saw that what the navvy had shouted was the only thing to do.

It was impossible to pull the express up. The driver had seen the signals off, an knowin that he was behind time was belt-in along as fast as his engine could go. It was afore these days o' trains fitted from end to end wi' continuous brakes that'll bring a train to a stand in 50 yards, an I could see that unless I switched it on to the loop it'd go dashin along an into the river on top o' the ill fated bridge.

I felt a kind o' dizziness come over me as I thought o' all them passengers a-sittin in the carriages comfortably readin or lookin out at the green an yellow fields as they passed, bein sent wi'out a word o' warnin to destruction, an sprang across to pull the levers back. As I did so I thought o' little Nelly a-comin down the loop wi' my dinner an how surprised she'd be to see the great express rushin toward her, an involuntarily I cast a glance out o' the window in the direction I knew she'd be comin.

Aye, there was the little figure I loved so well, sure enough. But what was that that made my heart grow suddenly cold wi'in me an sent the blood surgin up to my temples till my brain felt on fire? Passin my hand across my eyes, I looked again. Surely I must be mistaken!

No; It was no delusion. There was my little girl walkin in the four foot—a thing she'd never done afore to my knowledge—right in the track o' the advancin express. She had got the basket in one hand an was holdin her little hat up in the air wi' the other, an I almost fancied I could see the laugh o' childish glee on her face as she watched the bright ribbon flutterin in the breeze.

"Nelly, Nelly!" I shouted desperately, but she evidently didn't hear, for she took no notice.

A sickenin forebodin o' ill came over me, an I stood wi' my hand on the lever irresolute.

Has it ever struck you, sir, what a lot o' things can pass through your brain in the space o' half a minute? It struck me for the first time then. A whole series o' thoughts seemed to flood over me in that terrible few seconds.

If I pulled the lever back, it meant almost certain death to Nelly—chubby, rosy cheeked little Nelly, the darlin o' her mother's heart; the little, winsome child I'd played wi' on my knee ever since she was a baby—an if I didn't it meant equally certain destruction to the express, wi' its heavy freight o' human bein's, which was by this time not more than a couple o' hundred yards away.

That terrible struggle between love an duty which took place all inside o' half a minute will never be wiped off my memory.

"Switch her over, you fool!" yelled the plate layer, who had now got close up to the box. But then he, too, caught sight o' Nelly an was silent, for perhaps he, too, had got a little girl at home.

His shout did not rouse me, however, for wicked thoughts filled my brain. Who could say wi' any certainty what was the reason it didn't turn the course o' the train? Most likely it would be supposed that the shock had dazed me an rendered me incapable o' actin promptly, as had been the case wi' so many men afore me. Why shouldn't I let the express go on unchecked an save Nelly?

Thank God, though, the horrible temptation wasn't for long! I was one, but what was I compared wi' all the vast host o' wives an daughters an husbands an fathers that would be thrown into sorrow an mournin if any accident happened to that train? I should be branded ever after wi' the curse o' murder an worse than murder.

"Nelly, Nelly," I shouted through the window as loud as my parched throat would let me, "lie down, lie down!" an I pointed between the rails. Then, wi' one brief prayer that came right from the bottom o' my heart, I flung the handle back only just in time.

I heard the points come over, the engine almost strikin them as they did so, but just swervin in time to get on the loop, an then I knew no more, for my senses were mercifully taken away, an I fell to the floor o' the cabin in a dead swoon.

* * * * * * * *

When I came to again, I was lyin in my own room at home, wi' Jenny bendin over me an passin her hand over my burnin brow.

"Nelly," I murmured shudderin'ly, expectin to be greeted wi' a burst o' sobs.

To my surprise, however, Jenny went away, an in a few seconds, durin which I lay in a kind o' sleepy wonder, not havin quite recovered from my swoon, returned, leadin by the hand our little girl unharmed.

After I had caught her up in my arms an kissed her passionately again an again they told me how, on hearin my shout, she had obediently lain down, an how the big express, by some merciful dispensation o' Providence, had passed clean over her wi'out harmin her so much as a scratch. That's about all, sir, an here's your train a-bein signaled. The passengers, when they got to know about it, collected a sum o' money for me an called me a hero, but none o' them ever dreamed o' that terrible temptation.—London Tit-Bits.

The Abused Editor.

A Georgia newspaper man is going to give up journalism because he thinks editors are not treated fairly. "A child is born," he says. "The doctor in attendance gets $10; the editor notes it and gets 0. It is christened. The minister gets $4; the editor writes it up and gets 00. It marries. The minister gets another fee, the editor a piece of cake or 000. In course of time it dies. The doctor gets from $5 to $10; the minister gets another $4; the undertaker gets $25 to $40; the editor prints it and receives 0000 and then the privilege of running free of charge a card of thanks."

OCEAN CABLE MAKING.

He Who Does the Jointing Must Keep His Hands Almost Dainty.

Jointing is one of the most difficult and delicate operations in Atlantic cable making. To see a joint made I climbed, on one of my visits to Woolwich, up into a swallow nest of a cabin, fastened in some mysterious way to the side of a wall of the "core" tankroom. In the center of the little room sat an imposing individual, whose charcteristics seemed to be rotundity, profuse sweating and absolute cleanliness. An assistant shared the narrow space with him. A few simple iron tools and several big gas jets served as his equipment. First the assistant cut off a few inches from the two ends, pared down the gutta percha in such a way as to leave two or three inches of copper conductor uncovered, beveled each end with a file, laid them together, soldered them, and then wrapped the joint tightly for the distance of half an inch with fine copper wire. This wrapping insures a connection in case the soldering should some time break.

The other man so far had done nothing. It was explained that in the work of jointing the copper he was not allowed to share lest it should "spoil his hands." His duty was to joint the gutta percha, an operation in which much depends on delicacy of touch. When the copper joint was done, the core was passed on to him, and he proceeded to pare down the gutta percha until he had perhaps a foot in all to work on. He then heated the gum on each side with a spirit lamp, and with his fingers worked it down until the copper was all evenly covered. His next step was to build up the insulator. One after another strips of gutta percha, which had been heated at the end, were applied, wound around the core and carefully worked and molded the length of the wound.

Should a bit of dust, an air bubble, a speck of moisture, be left in the insulator, it would give trouble later. Hence this heating and kneading and caution against dirt. Experience has shown, too, that no machine will pack the gutta percha at this critical point so perfectly as the human fingers. They alone can feel when the work is progressing properly and is finished satisfactorily. Hence the care to keep them always sensitive, to prevent their becoming callous by rougher work. —McClure's.

MILLS RESUME WORK.

The Outlook for Business is Promising.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., August 23.—The Girard Mill, of the Union Iron and Steel Company which has not been in operation for four years, will start again on Wednesday. It employs about two hundred hands.

CLEVELAND, O., August 23.—Work was resumed in all departments of the Britton Tin Plate Mill to-day, the strikers accepting the terms of the company and going back to work. Work has also been resumed in all departments of the Union Rolling Mill.

BOSTON, August 23.—Dispatches from different New England manufacturing centres to-day announce that many cotton mills which have been idle resumed operations to-day. During a part of July and August thousands of spindles were not operated in this section, owing to unsatisfactory conditions which prevailed, either in the finished goods or new cotton market, or to the need of repairs. In addition to this, several other mills closed for two weeks in accordance with their annual mid summer custom. Many of the Fall River mills resumed operations last week and several started to-day. Several of the Lowell mills resumed in whole or in part to-day and reports from that city indicate that the outlook is promising.

DRY GOODS MARKET.

Activity in All Grades—Staple Cottons Very Firm.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

NEW YORK, August 23.—The dry goods market opened with pronounced activity in all grades. The market for cottons continued active, the slight falling off in the demand noted at last week's close being recovered to-day on mail orders from all sections of the country. The price situation is still firm in all grades, being noticeably so in brown goods, though sellers show little inclination to recede in any grade. Woollens in all lines show the same strong front which has ruled for the past weeks. In men's wear fabrics the continued sales on the road at the advanced prices ruling are the subject of pleasant comment in the trade. This is not confined only to the cheaper lines, but a considerable amount of higher priced goods have been disposed of recently.

Staple cottons are very firm. In brown goods there are many buyers ready to duplicate previous orders, but sellers are, as a rule, disinclined to part with goods at anything less than current rates. Export goods have gained somewhat in demand, but are not as active as those for domestic use. Ducks and osnaburgs are firm.

RACE WAR IMMINENT.

Negro Fanatics in Etowah County, Alabama, Threaten to Exterminate the Whites.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

MONTGOMERY, August 23.—A special to the Advertiser from Gadsden, Ala., says: A race war is imminent in Etowah county. A negro woman has been preaching on Sand Mountain to negroes and ignorant whites, claiming she is the Messiah and can do all things. They had a big foot-washing Sunday and negroes and whites mingled freely, embracing each other with the "holy kiss." This morning the negro woman met one of the best citizens of the town and cursed him. He finally cowhided her within an inch of her life. Her followers swear they will exterminate the better element of the white people and a clash may come at any time.

KILLED BY A NEGRO.

A Prominent Turpentine Distiller at Fitzgerald, Georgia.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

MACON, August 23.—A special to the Telegraph from Fitzgerald, Ga., says: Edward Strickland, a prominent turpentine man, whose still is about three miles northwest of Fitzgerald, was literally cut to pieces Saturday by Charles Nichols, a negro in his employ. It seems that in settling up for work done a dispute arose over the wages, which enraged the negro. He pulled a razor and disembowelled Strickland, who was also hacked in five other places, and soon died. A mob of blacks and whites is after Nichols, who took Strickland's Winchester and escaped. If the negro is captured he will probably be lynched.

CHARLESTON TO KLONDIKE.

A Steamship Chartered to Sail February 15th.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

CHARLESTON, S. C., August 23.—A syndicate of local capitalists, headed by A. S. Emerson, have chartered a steamship and will run her from Charleston to Klondike. She will sail from here February 15th, going to St. Michaels by way of Cape Horn. The passengers will be transferred to smaller boats and towed up the river to Dawson City. Each passenger will be allowed to carry 1,000 pounds of freight, and tickets will cost $500. It is expected that the trip will require seventy days.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

The horse went down and the boy's skull was fractured by the fall. He died in an ambulance en route to the hospital. In the first race Sir Archer and Lulu S. fell. Jockey Webber, who went down with Lulu S. was carried from the track unconscious. He is badly hurt but will recover.

BIG BREAK IN WHEAT.

The Bears Pounded the Market—Heavy Declines in Prices in Chicago and New York.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

NEW YORK, August 23.—There was a lively season of general unloading by all classes of traders in the wheat pit today, which resulted in a net break of 2c. a bushel from Saturday's official close and about four cents from the best curb price of Saturday. Transactions in the aggregate reached 4,000,000 bushels and yet trading at times was dull to the point of stagnation. The selling was right at the opening when foreign houses joined in heavily and again near the close. Except for a brief period of strength following immediately after the opening the market showed positive heaviness all day.

CHICAGO, August 23.—Speculative markets on the Board of Trade to-day succumbed to profit-taking sales and registered the first declines of moment in a fortnight. Liquidation which began on Saturday continued on an enormous scale at the opening. During the first fifteen minutes of the session fluctuations were the most violent in many years, covering in the range for five cents. The bears, who have been hibernating for some time, took fresh courage and pounded the market on every bulge, only letting up after establishing a net decline of 3¼ cents for the day in September wheat, ½c in September corn and ⅝c in September oats.

Sales of September wheat were made on the curb this morning at the highest figure yet reached—$1.02½. The regular session opened with a wild rush to sell with trades made on a range of three cents, September going at from 97c to $1.00. Everybody in the pit seemed to have but one end in view and that was to let go. September tumbled with a rush to 95c, December touching 94¾c. A few more buying orders were then distributed where they would do the most good, and what looked for a moment like a panic was turned into a rush for cover. It sold up without reaction of more than ½c to 99¾c. Another took place but in a low, deliberate way. The visible supply was very much of a disappointment to the bulls, showing less than half of the decrease they had confidently figured upon. Short sales were thought to be a good speculation when the seller obtained within a few cents of a dollar and the bears opened their spouts with a will, only ceasing operations when the price of September again rested at 98 cents. The routine news of the day was practically disregarded. Foreign crop damage news and sensational advances in English and European markets only had a tendency to invigorate traders with bearish tendencies seemingly.

THE COAL CONFERENCE

Adjourned Without Agreement — Both Sides Hope to Effect a Settlement To-day.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

PITTSBURG, PA., August 23.—The conference of operators and miners' officials adjourned shortly before 11 o'clock without reaching an agreement. Another conference will be held to-morrow morning, when both sides hope to effect a settlement. G. W. Schlendenberg, a member of the operators' committee, stated that the question of settlement in other States had been eliminated and that the conference was dealing entirely with the rate in the Pittsburg district.

National President Ratchford said that the men are still firm for the sixty-nine cent rate and District President Dolan said that a settlement in ten minutes after the opening of the conference was not impossible.

PITTSBURG, August 23.—This evening National President Ratchford made the following statement:

"We met and heard the purpose of the conference explained. In coming here I was ignorant of its object, excepting as it was explained by President Dolan. He said it was to be an inter-state conference, and that was my impression. When I heard Col. Rend talk in the meeting, I learned that the object was to submit the matter to arbitration. Being favorable to arbitration and also an inter-state conference myself, I decided that both objects were worthy and during the afternoon we discussed both of them.

"There is feeling of opposition on the part of the operators against an inter-State conference for certain business reasons. The general feeling among them is in favor of arbitration. To this we have no objection. We favor arbitration, but insist that this question, if arbitrated, must be arbitrated on the basis of living wages. Further than this we will not go. The operators, on the other hand, believe that work should be resumed at the old prices, pending arbitration, at a retroactive rate. We struck against the old price because it did not afford our miners a living and we will not resume work at any price less than the price demanded, which is the lowest possible rate men can labor for."

DEMONSTRATION BY STRIKERS.

Railroad Train Seized at Cincinnati and Wellston, Ohio.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

CINCINNATI, August 23.—A special to the Commercial-Tribune from Wellston, Ohio, says: Seven hundred miners, headed by three brass bands, flagged a mixed freight and passenger train on the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton railroad this morning at a crossing in the southern part of this city. The train came to a stop and was boarded by the men. The trainmen refused to go on and backed their train to the depot, where they were ordered by officials of the road to proceed. The miners were en route to Oakhill, where there was a mine in full operation. Arriving at Oakhill, the strikers marched to the mine and demanded that the men come out. This they did, but not before being assured that no harm was intended if they conducted themselves right. The men then held a meeting and informed the strikers that they would not work until the strike was settled. They were compelled to march with the strikers through the principal streets of Oakhill.

Returning to Wellston, the strikers captured a Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern freight train. Its conductor at first refused to move his train, but went into Wellston when informed that the miners were going to stay on board until he did move. This is the second time the strikers have taken the men out of Oakhill and they informed them that if they were compelled to make a third trip they would make it unpleasant for them. Trouble is feared if any further attempt to mine coal is made.

Sam Harvey, a fourteen year old boy, has been arrested at Lexington, Va., for setting fire to the barn of M. R. Brown, in which the colored men John Pettigrew and Charles Lee were roasted to death.

The first bale of new cotton was received at Norfolk yesterday. It came from Clio, S. C., and graded strict low middling and was sold at 9 cents per pound to Cobb Brothers & Company.

THE RISING IN INDIA.

MORE FIGHTING ON THE AFGHANISTAN FRONTIER.

Reports That Two Forts Attacked by the Afridis Have Fallen Into the Hands of the Enemy.

By Cable to the Morning Star.

SIMLA, August 23.—A large force of Afridis, it is reported, has advanced down the Khyber Pass and the so-called Mad Mullah, or fanatical priest, who is inciting the natives of that territory against the British, is said to have collected the Mohmands for an attack upon Michni and Shabkadr.

The Royal Irish regiment and representative native infantry, with a battery of mountain artillery, have gone to Kohat.

PESHAWUR, August 23.—The Afridis began an attack upon Ali-Musjed at 8 o'clock this morning, and upon Fort Maude shortly after 10 o'clock. Both are garrisoned with Khyber native levies.

The enemy is also entering Khyber Pass. Gen. Wesmascott has sent artillery to the mouth of the pass. The artillery was accompanied by the Ninth Bengal Lancers.

SIMLA, August 23.—There are persistent rumors here to-night that Fort Ali-Musjed and Fort Maude, which were attacked this morning by the Afridis, have fallen into the hands of the enemy, but there is no official confirmation of these reports.

The government has received a written communication from the Ameer of Afghanistan, in which he denies all responsibility for the rising of the Mullahs or fanatical priests of the different tribes.

THE MINERS STRIKE.

Everything Quiet at the Camps—Another Attempt to March to be Made.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

PITTSBURG, August 23.—Everything is quiet at the miners' camps to-night but another attempt will be made to march in the morning.

Antonio Todasta, the striking miner who was shot yesterday at his boarding house near Oakhill, was reported to be slightly improved, although his condition is still critical. The others who were hurt in the fight were not dangerously injured and will recover. The Belatina brothers were arrested shortly after the affair and brought to Pittsburg to-day. None of the negroes implicated in the shooting at Unity yesterday have been arrested.

The campers are arranging for another big turnout of the farmers next Tuesday night. At Greensburg this afternoon Judge McConnell continued the restraining order against the River and Herminie strikers, issued a few days ago. It was developed at the hearing that the Arona and Madison mines were nearly all in favor of working and no further trouble is anticipated.

The shooting affair among the Italian miners of the New York and Cleveland Gas Company was made the occasion of for a general meeting of organized labor to-morrow evening at Knights of Labor Hall.

About 900 miners are working on it and it is expected that it will be ready in a few weeks. At Dyea the miners are getting across as rapidly as could be expected. Juneau is rapidly filling up with miners from Dyea and Skaguay who propose to winter there.

WHEAT CORNER CLAIMED.

New York Syndicate Operating in Chicago Expects to Win Several Millions.

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—It looks to-night as though the New York clique back of the bull movement in wheat stood to make what is known as a "big killing." The syndicate represented here by Mr. French of New York yesterday held 8,000,000 bushels of wheat, 10,000,000 bushels of corn, and 3,000,000 bushels of oats. All of the wheat was purchased at from 80 to 84 cents.

To-day they purchased 2 000 000 bushels of wheat, 1,500 000 bushels of oats, and between 2 000 000 and 3,000,000 bushels of corn, and to-night their representatives were out on the curb till dark bidding 2 cents over the market price. They believe they have the wheat market cornered. If they have, they stand to win several million dollars on that cereal.

They are by no means sure of their corn investment, and may possibly lose in that what they make in wheat. To-morrow's session will be most exciting.

FACTS!

We Copy From the "Dry Goods Chronicle" of July 24th, the Following

High Prices for Carpets.

"And talking of carpets and carpet people, are you fully aware of whae the new tariff means to the carpet buyer? Under the McKinley bill the price of carpets was 10 cents higher than they are to-day, and the new duty, as provided by the Dingley bill, on raw materials that enter into the manufacture of carpets is higher than under the McKinley bill. Naturally prices have to go up. Present prices can last only until the present stock of raw material is exhausted. The stock of carpet wool on hand is very light. The wise buyer will place his order without delay. Carpets will never be so cheap again in the next three years."

"High Prices for All Woollen Goods."

"Nothing in the future can be more absolutely assured than higher prices for Woollen goods, and though it may be unduly delayed by trade conditions, there can be no mistake made in purchases on the present basis of values."

We have LADIES, CHILDREN'S and GENTLEMEN'S WOOLLEN UNDERWEAR at last year's prices, and we believe it will be to your advantage to buy your winter supply now.

We purchased during last Spring $5,000 worth of CARPETS, and offer them until the 1st of September at last year's prices.

We have a few BLANKETS which it will pay you to examine.
